Description:

Abandoned dolls have long been among the classic icons of horror. They become even more unsettling when familiar childhood memories suddenly take a sinister turn and the toys appear to move on their own, silently making their way through the darkness. That is exactly the effect this extraordinary Halloween figure creates, delivering unforgettable scares.

The pale doll wears a plaid top and a dark skirt. Long black hair frames her expressionless face, which immediately draws attention. Instead of real eyes, two oversized buttons stare out from her pale face, while her mouth appears to have been crudely stitched shut. Her pale hands rest motionless on a weathered rocking horse mounted on a motorized base, giving the figure its own uniquely disturbing presence.

As soon as the animation is activated, the figure begins moving on its own. It first travels forward and backward before continuing on its path, creating the eerie impression that it is deliberately roaming the room. The movement is accompanied by a dark soundscape and the distinctive whirring of the drive mechanism, reminiscent of an old mechanical toy, which adds even more tension to the overall effect. The figure is especially effective in long hallways, entryways, or spacious rooms.

To ensure the animation operates without obstruction, make sure the figure has sufficient unobstructed space to travel. When activated automatically via the integrated sound sensor, the figure continues moving in the same direction each time it is triggered unless its direction is changed manually. This movement pattern should be taken into account when choosing the installation location.
